Personal attacks still flying over decision to hire coaching personnel

BY JOHN WATERMAN Staff Writer

A desision made by the Hancock County School Board last week to place the power of hiring and firing coaching personnel in the hands of school administration was upheld this week--but not without contention.

At the beginning of a special meeting Monday, the board went into executive session to discuss a personnel issue. Several minutes later, when the public was readmitted to the meeting, board member Peggy Ladner said the executive session had been called inappropriately.

Superintendent David Kopf said he called the session because personnel matters had to be discussed.

Board President Morgan Ladner, who also agreed the special session had been unneccessary, explained that there had been a disagreement between the board and the County Narcotics Division Agents and Investigators arrested two suspects Friday in connection with possession of crystal meth, (Ice), Sheriff Steve Garber reports.

Narcotic's Division director Major Matt Karl said, "Micheal Holland, 50, was arrested and charged with possession of crystal meth (Ice), and intent to distribute, and also possession of firearms by a convicted felon. Also, accomplice, Sandra Kay Stone, 45, was arrested and charged with possession of a controlled substance, (crystal meth), in addition to being held on a warrant out of Pearl River County."

Karl reported his department and received an anonymous tip of possible drug activities being conducted from a Waveland Motel. "We set up a surveillance for several days before making the bust."

Both Holland and Stone convicted felon, according to Karl. An additional bond of $50,000 was added to Holland on Monday for the alleged theft of a stolen travel trailer, Investigator Roan reported.

Stone's bond was set at $5,000 in addition to a hold for Pearl River Sheriff's Department, Karl said.

Criminal Investigator Tom Roan, who participated in the drug bust said, Holland has also been implicated in the alleged theft of a 27 ft, Prowler Trailer on

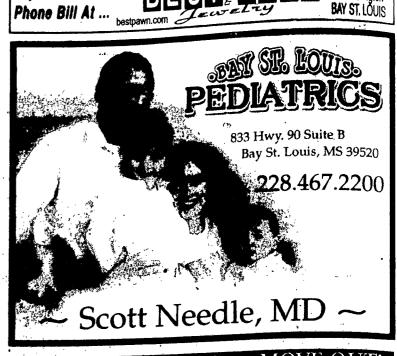

"Following arrest on drug and possession of firearms by a convicted felon, led to additional parties and provided information about the stolen travel trailer. Putting the puzzle together led to locating and recovery of the trailer on the Joe Moran Road location," Roan added. When the travel trailer was stolen, a VCR, TV, assorted jewelry, etc., was also reported stolen, Roan

Information received indicated the suspect dropped the trailer off and was to return at a later date, Roan reported.

An additional bond of $50,000 was added to Holland at the Hancock County Criminal Justice Facility where he is lodged. Roan said.

Roan allowed that ATF was checking the two hand guns and assault rifle officers confiscated Friday in Holland's motel room. The Drive residence in Shoreline case is still under investiga-

Supervisors voted to uphold a decision by the Solid Waste Authority to deny Boudin the right to do so. Boudin's attorney Albert Necaise said his client had spent more than $20,000 to test soil at the site to determine if it was suitable for a Class 1 site. The county is in need of another Class 1 site, he said. At a public hearing on the matter only one person was opposed to the idea, Necaise said. He was advised to file a bill of exception with the court.

Zoning change hearing today for Blue Meadow Road townhouse project

STAFF WRITER

A proposed town home development along three. canals off of Blue Meadow Rd. and the Jourdan River will be the subject of a public hearing this afternoon. Ocean Springs development company Gulf Coast Equities/Blue Meadow LLC and Lisa Crispo are asking for a zoning change that would allow 162 multi-family units to be built along the three canals. The hearing will be held at 4:30 today at the Hancock County Court House in the Supervisors board room.

The 162 unit development, on about 5 acres, will include 343 parking spaces, docks, a swimming pool and a clubhouse. An existing boat launch will be incorporated into the design, Crispo said. A boat yard currently operates on part of the property. New zoning would change the property from R-1 residential to a Waterfront Special Use District.

Though she does not have an artist rendering of the townhomes, proposed Crispo said they will be Nantucket style with porches at each unit. Height restrictions will be observed and buildings will be no wider than 40 feet, Crispo said in a proposal letter. The developers have not asked for any height variances, building official Mickey confirmed. Lagasse Restrictions in the area limit height to 35 feet.

The townhomes will be marketed to families looking for a second home or to retirees, said Crispo. The a proposed change to R2-A, amenities would be open for use by the neighborhood, Crispo said. After talking with neighbors she sensed no clear opposition to the plan, she said. But Lagasse said his office had received quite a few negative calls on the project. "People are not happy about it for the most part," he said.

In other business: • A second public hearing on a proposed zoning change in the Bull Creek neighborhood of White Cypress has been canceled for today because of a mistake in the wording of the public notice. The public notice said that there was a proposed a zoning change from R-3 multi-family to E-

1. That classification does not allow mobile homes. The notice should have advised which allows mobile homes.

Lagasse said, the office is considering asking that a new zoning classification be added in the county, E-2. The new classification would allow mobile homes but require lots to remain large, at least two acres. Most of the lots in Bull Creek are two acres or more, Lagasse said.

• While a challenge to new zoning allowing unrestricted height and density developments in the Lakeshore area awaits a court hearing, Cure Land Company LLC is going ahead with the business of selling their proposed condominium units. The planning commission gave permission to the company to go ahead with plans to open a sales office at 7481 Highway 90.

Agencies to sample øysters next week in Bay of St. Louis

BY BENNIE SHALLBETER STAFF WRITER

The Department of Environmental Quality and the Department of Marine Resources will head out on Monday to begin a new round of testing on area shellfish, oysters specifically. The agencies had planned to gather new samples earlier this month, but had to cancel because of

"Early storms have made scrambled eggs out of out testing schedule," said DEQ biologist Henry Folmer.

Samples from 11 or 12 sites across the Mississippi coast will be gathered, two in the Bay. One of the local sites will be near the mouth of the Bay and the other will be at the DuPont DeLisle outfall line, said Folmer. The process should take about two weeks to complete.

Results from a preliminary study of oysters and clams that the DMR and the DEQ collected in May were not intended to validate or invalidate any previous studies, said Phil bass at the Office of Pollution possible. Control.

We were just trying to tune up for a big study we plan to do later, Bass said. The initial study was not done under the complete guidelines of our quality assurance program, he said, but the next study will follow all those guidelines. Proposed procedures are under review by the EPA, said Fölmer.

The agencies collected samples in the Mississippi Sound and in the Bay of St. Louis after a study published in the Journal of Shellfish Research reported high levels of heavy metals and elevated levels of dioxins in oysters and rangia clams taken from various locations in the Bay. The study recommended consuming no more than one oyster a day and pointed to the DuPont DeLisle plant as the likely source of contamination.

published study as much as

"July is the month I believe they conducted their study," he said. "Dr. Bill Walker and his team with the DMR will be heading up the study. They are the ovster experts."

Bass said his agency has no plans to contact anyone involved with the published study, but Walker might, he used as the primary lab for said.

Results from the preliminary samples tested at the DEQ lab in Pearl show contamination levels much lower than the published study. Partial results from an independent lab Batelle in Washington State are in, said DEQ biologist Henry Folmer, but the agency is waiting for results from an ICP Mass Spec before analyzing any results.

The new samples will be tested in three labs, the DEQ lab in Pearl, Batelle and a Federal Drug Administration lab as a con-Director of Pollution trol, Folmer said. Zoning change request is cause for concern

Dear Editor,

It is with great concern that I write this letter to you. Julie Rossen, the developer of The Acadian Bay and Sundance subdivisions, is requesting a zoning change from R-1 (singlefamily) to R-3 (Multi-family, Condos) for the property that is adjacent to her Sundance development. She has a potential buyer for the property if she can push through this zoning change. The Sundance development is in the middle of a neighborhood accessed by Sears Avenue that is entirely single-family homes. This area has experienced excessive flooding and sewer backups due to the insufficient infrastructure. As a result raw sewerage ends up in the storm run-off ditches and eventually in the Sound.

I am aware that the city has gotten funding to make and drainage systems, but I would be able to handle a 240-unit Condominium development that the buyer of the Rossen property proposes to build.

Secondly, my family has owned our property since 1947. My husband and I have owned it since Camille (1969). It was our intention to move full-time to Waveland upon retirement. However, as we began to stretch each weekend into, first 3-day weekends, then into 4-day weekends, we realized that our hearts belonged to Waveland. My husband now commutes into New Orleans each morning, knowing that each afternoon he will return to his "Paradise." Will he still capacity of the present feel the same way when estimated minimum of 240 vehicles are added to Sears Avenue in the a.m. and p.m.? Will we still hear the sounds of the waves on the water three streets back improvements to the sewer from the Beach Road as we sit on our porch in the find it hard to believe that evening? Or will the future residents of the 240-unit Condo honk the horn madly behind him as he follows the 25-mph speed limit up Sears Avenue to the railroad tracks? Will the reflected heat from all the new concrete turn the pine-scented breeze from fragrant to dumpster tainted air? You will not be able to convince me that condos are the appropriate development for this property. I've been here too long and know that I, as well as my neighbors, enjoy my single-family, carefully planned development that is our home/neighborhood now.

One of the reasons for officers striking out so early in the morning, was because of the recent heat wave.

Garber said, "Our department is still working hard to combat drugs in the county. It is a good thing to make these arrests on drug dealer suspects, at the same time it sad we have this problem in our community.'

passed on to Corrections Officers who booked them and did searches for any possible foreign objects on them.

Warden Major Namoi Childress reported, "Once a suspect is booked, a number of procedures have to be followed. Corrections Officers take photos, searches, make a telephone available for a call to a family member or a bondsman, even if they cannot be bonded out, they are given an opportunity to call a family member or friend."

"Suspects who are able to be bonded out are kept downstairs, and when we have a group like this morning, after everyone has an opportunity to make their telephone call, then they can start being bonded out by a family member or bondsman," Childress added.

Childress continued. "Suspects who cannot be bonded out, or have no bond posted, are then dressed out in an inmate's uniform and moved to the upstairs cells." It so happened that an effort to prevent Gulfside Methodist Assembly from building a similar project in the same area. That project would have housed seniors and bordered the Sundance subdivision. At that time Rosson added her name to a petition against the zoning change that Gulfside had requested.

'Operation Heat Wave' took place during a Corrections Officers shift change, so the night shift remained on duty until most of the booking operations took place. because of the increase in traffic at the jail, according to Childress.

"We think that the developers are under the impression that everyone in Sundance is in favor of this project," said another group member Carolyn Hollister, "But they are mistaken-we plan to present three speakers who are property owners there and who oppose the project. We don't care how much money the developers, or real estate agents, or others stand to make on thisthis is a quiet residential area and we like it that

Hollister said her group will oppose the project for the same reasons they opposed the Gulfside project, too much added traffic, already existing drainage and sewer problems, and concern about fire protection. Already strained infrastructure in the area cannot handle the added residents and cars that a project of this size would bring, she said.

Spokesperson for the The group was central in newly formed citizen's group, watch Coastal Community Watch, Ellis Anderson said her group will ask the City of Waveland to take the same stance that the City of Bay St. Louis did in May. arose in 2003 over Tuck's. failure to disclose the source of $510,000 that her 1999 lieutenant governor campaign finance report indicated as put into the campaign out of her own funds.

As was well known from Tuck's state ethics commission filings, her net worth made it extremely doubtful that she could personally infuse such a large amount of money into her campaign fund. Hence some reporters pushed her to tell the source of the money, but got no answers.

In June, 2003, The Sun Herald newspaper, which broke the story originally, filed a lawsuit demanding that Tuck reveal the source of the 1999 campaign loan and contending she had violated the state campaign finance law. While Tuck was still contending the money source was "confidential information," and that she had violated no law, wealthy Pascagoula trial attorney Dickie Scruggs came forward and revealed he had personally guaranteed the $510,000.

Thereupon, Tuck on July 8, 2003 (four years late, mind you) amended her 1999 campaign finance reports with the secretary of state's office to reflect a lump sum payment of $481,177 that day to complete repayment of her obligation to Scruggs plus interest. By then, as a Republican,

Tuck's campaign fund was bulging, so she had ample money to repay Scruggs. However, her new-found Republican friends doubtless had no inkling that a big chunk of the bucks they were pouring into her campaign coffers was going to what one newspaper called the "king of torts."

As Haley Barbour's dutiful handmaiden in carrying the water for his legislative agenda in the Senate, the Republican Party now owes Tuck big time to take care of her in some well-paying job when her term runs out in

Of course, if the secretary of state job opens up in the meantime and it is handed to her--as the most likely to get the nod--she would be virtually assured of staying on the state payroll for a long time, since it would be much easier for her to get elected to the job if she's already there.

Even if the scenario of Clark leaving and Tuck appointed his successor doesn't happen, there was a good chance Tuck was going to run for secretary of state anyway in 2007. Because Tuck is term-limited as lite guv, Clark himself has been eyeing a run for her post. Some say he could be the Democrats hope to take on Barbour in 2007, but in my book that's unlikely.

Meantime, there's some confusion about where it would leave the state Senate if Tuck, who as lieutenant governor is president of the Senate, should vacate the office to move over to tive secretary of state

Some evidently have the mistaken idea that Sen. Travis Little (R. Corinth) as president pro tempore would move up to become lieutenant governor. That doesn't happen.

Back in 1966 when Lt. Gov. Carroll Gartin died in office with more a year left in his term, Sen. George Yarborough of Red Banks, then president pro tem, attempted to call himself lieutenant governor and even had the title painted on the glass door to his office.

Overnight, some senators scratched it off, and put him back in his place as pro tem and nothing more. Of course if there's no lieutenant governor, Little would preside over sessions. But since he is elected from the Senate membership and not the state at large, technically senators could vote him out of the pro tem job and give it to another senator.

At least we don't seem to lack fun and games in the political world, even in the heat of summer.

Mississippi's economic forecast is bright

BY TATE REEVES STATE TREASURER

With the passing of Fiscal happy to report that the state economy is showing signs of life. There is a light at the end of the tunnel.

The Governor and I recently returned from Wall Street where we reported this good news to some of the biggest players in the financial markets - the ones who rank our credit worthiness relative to our peers. We were pleased to report to them that Mississippi is making significant econom-Better still, this progress is in the three areas that matter most: standing debt.

The administrations' Year 2005 on June 30, I am focus on job creation is working. The Center for Policy Research and Planning reports that over 13,000 new jobs were created in the first four quarters of this administration. Rising revenue collections indicate strong economic activity and are a leading indicator our economy is expanding. In 2004, we collected four percent more in taxes than we did in 2003. In 2005, total tax collections rose another seven percent. That means that we collected a quarter of a billion dollars more this economic development, bal- year than we did last and Spending less and reducing was increased. Better still is that we are putting $60 million of that in the state's savings account.

The Legislature passed a budget for fiscal year 2006 that prioritizes education and public safety but actually spends 1.75 percent less than the previous year. Very few of our colleagues across the country can claim that they will actually reduce spending next year. Is it perfect? No. Does it show financial progress? The budget Absolutely. reduces the use of one-time revenue streams from $700 million in 2004 to under $100 million this year.

ancing the budget and out- not one individual's tax rate our use of one-time money future years, less money for recurring expenses is something we can all be proud of in the 2006 budget.

> Proactive debt manageadministration. The first course of action was to review all of our state's contractual relationships. By making our lenders compete for our variable rate debt, we were able to cut the fees by a fourth, saving the taxpayers over $1 million even before taking into account on our weekly auctions.

In the five years before I Mississippi "rebated" nearly $10 million to the federal heard. government in the form of arbitrage penalties.

worked with the various state agencies to emphasize the need to comply with the federal laws on tax-exempt issuance. The result? We have reduced our unspent bond proceeds from nearly $800 million in 2004 to less than $500 million today. This year's arbitrage payment was estimated to be nearly $3 million, but we kept it under $300,000. The difference is a net savings to the taxpayers.

We have prioritized individual projects eligible for long term debt to slow the growth of our debt burden. Since 1990, our state's bonded indebtedness had grown from $500 million to nearly $3.2 billion. When I took office, every man, woman, and child owed $1,207 to our debt holders. I am nappy to report for the first time since 1987, the State actually reduced the debt burden on taxpayers in the recently finished fiscal year. This is

by Paul Estronza La Violette laviole formail.datasync.com ww.annabellepublishing.com

(The following is extracted from "Holly!! and his Black Coat of Invisibility." I will be doing some readings from it tonight at Da Beachouse. Please stop by.)

've discovered a new handle on Holly, our cat: his tail. Now, I know I'm going to get all kinds of static about this from cat lovers diency sometimes requires drastic measures and I grab what I can grab.

Lately, Stella has been complaining about finding small fluffy balls of fur around the house and telling me to start brushing Jennie. Now Jennie is a Weimaraner, a sort of gray German hound with blue eyes and short hair. So I'm quick to tell Stella that Jennie is not the one responsible for the fur, it's Holly.

"It's probably both of them," she says with typical twisted female logic.

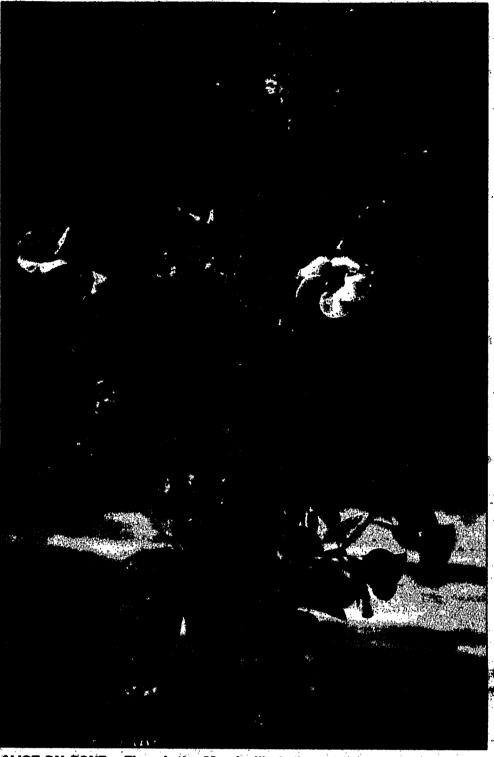

Jennie is no problem to brush. I merely take off her collar and she becomes terrified. She's knows she is naked and she is sure everybody can see her. Until I put I put it back on her, she will follow me anywhere. Her stumpy tail is down and she sticks very close to me, casting nervous glances around to see if anyone is watching.

I put her on the edge of the porch and stand in the grass in front of her. She is just at the right height and in a few moments, dodging the licks she tries to give me, she's being brushed. I use a metal wire brush and it does a good job. I will admit that Jennie does need brushing, it takes longer then I thought. I have to clean the brush a few times before I'm done. I put her collar back on and she starts an insane puppy-like scamper around the front lawn to show her happiness.

That done, I turn around for Holly. This is where using the tail as a handle comes in. Up to then Holly has expressed no interest in what has been taking place. He lies on the porch a few feet away from us, stretched out in a sort of regal pose watching the waters of the Sound, deep in an aura of contemplative meditation that only a cat can assume. Now, what with Jennie's antics and my turning toward him, reality sinks in and Holly attempts to leave. I dive and, as I said, the tail makes a good grabbing

Nonstop blooms make Mandevilla unbeatable in your summer garden

y neighbor down the street already has everyone gawking with a spectacular Mandevilla on her mailbox. It's been that way for a few weeks, yielding dozens of blooms every day.

Many gardeners shop for plants that will bloom all summer and right up until fall. That's a pretty tall order to fill considering our extreme summer climate, but at the top of that list has to be the hybrid Mandevilla Alice du Pont.

The Mandevilla is from Brazil, but at the garden center you will get the feeling it is one of the locals. It is related to the Allamanda vine with yellow, bellshaped flowers and to plumeria, the flowers that Hawaiian leis are made of.

Southern Gardening by Norman Winter MSU Hortculturist

Alice du Pont has large, pink, bell-shaped flowers produced on a vigorous vine. The dark, glossy leaves have a leathery feeling.

As with almost every other plant I write about, it needswell-drained soil to survive. For best flowering, you will want your Mandevilla to receive at least six to eight hours of sunlight a day. Full sunlight is better.

Since it is such a vigorous vine and flower producer, it needs small doses

the state of the s of fertilizer every two to three weeks. Use a balanced, water-soluble fertilizer. Be sure to maintain moisture during the hot, dry times of the summer. A prolonged period without water may prove fatal to the plant.

I have even seen Mandevilla planted in a large basket hanging on a long chain at least two stories high.

The Mandevilla was growing up the 6- or 7-footlong chain, and you really couldn't see the chain for the leaves and the flowers. A tri-color ornamental sweet potato flowing out of the basket in all directions helped set off the Mandevilla.

One of the three colors was the same pink as the Mandevilla.

A couple of years ago I saw a giant, iridescent blue-flowered clematis right next to the Mandevilla. This mixture of Southern perennial and Brazilian tropical was bold and spectacular.

If you have lattice structures around the house, the Mandevilla is one plant that is a must. Its ability to climb and bloom until fall makes it a winner. Because it is a tropical from Brazil, gardeners on the Coast -- probably south of I-10 -- can get it to establish permanently. The rest of us will have to either treat it as an annual or give it winter protection.

Before bringing it indoors, cut off all growth to make it the desired shape. It will not bloom indoors unless it is in a sunroom. Our goal is simply to hold the plant until the next planting season.

Another method, and probably the easiest for most of us, is to cut it back to about 6 inches and provide as bright a light as possible and minimal water. Do not fertilize during this time. As the plant grows, keep it pinched back to leaf axis so it will develop a bushy habit.

In the spring, re-pot or plant in the landscape and resume a fertilization program. The Mandevilla is a hot buy right now, so take advantage of the season.

point. I pick him up and place him on the railing beside the porch steps. He attempts to escape, getting along the railing about a foot before coming to a dead stop - I still have his tail. With him heading one way and my pulling the tail the other, he is stretched out in perfect position for brushing and I brush.

As I was growing up I was given a few words of advice that I was told would guide me toward a rich and happy life. One of these was never buy a used car and the other was never trust anyone who offers you a free kitten. I bought a used Chevy once that gave me many problems before I traded it for a new Volkswagen. From this experience I vowed never to get a cat. This resolve ended about a year ago when a friend, in Bay St. Louis, offered me a kitten, a black

"I can't have a cat, I'm allergic to cats."

"Oh, you won't have problems with this cat," she said. "See, he has short hair."

Now, as I start to brush Holly on the railing, I can see something that I hadn't noticed before; the short hair is getting long. I brush harder and Holly stretches his body out further. I keep a firm grip on his tail.

About six months ago, I started having allergies and went to see Sidney. He spent about fifteen minutes tapping my chest and looking in my ear and then, as he started to write something in my file, said, "Get rid of the cat.'

I protested and asked if there were any medicines I could take.

"Sure, there are," he said and he sat down and recited a long list. "But none of these work perfectly and they're expensive. Get rid of the cat." When I didn't respond, he sighed and said, "I didn't think you would." He called in Nell, his nurse, and told her to write me a prescription. He's right, it doesn't work all that well and it is expensive.

Now the heat of summer is here and I realize, as I work with the brush on Holly's lustrous long black fur, that both he and Jennie are shedding their winter coats. When I let him go and he joins Jennie on the grass. I can see that their glossy new summer coats look good on both of them.

Later as I vacuum and sweep around the house. I find that they have been shedding quite a bit of hair. I repeat the vacuuming later in the week and soon. Stella drops a mention about not seeing any more fur balls. Still, the ritual of the porch brushing has been taking place each weekend, accompanied by Jennie's embarrassed glances and Holly's taut body stretch.

I did notice something last weekend as I was brushing Holly. I heard a noise, a low deep hum. I looked around, not sure where the noise was coming from. Then I leaned forward, never stopping the brushstrokes, and listened to Holly.

He was purring.

Severe injuries often accompany ATV accidents

CHRISTENSEN Health and Research

News Service When the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission recently reported a 10 percent rise in injuries related to all-terrain vehicles. Dr. Michael Winkelmann of Madison wasn't the least bit surprised.

"It seems like every month I have at least one patient who has had an ATV accident," said the physical medicine physician at Met odist Rehabilitation Center in Jackson.

Dr. Winkelmann said Methodist admitted four such victims in January. three with spinal cord injuries and one with a brain injury. As is the trend, all four were teenagers.

"They are usually younger individuals who have a lack of respect for the dangers of these vehicles," he said. "I've seen so many injuries with absolutely dismal outcomes, I won't let my Moorehead said Matt had been riding his own ATV since age 12, and he was never reckless. But on the night of Nov. 19, he was taking part in what the ATV industry calls "warnedagainst behaviors"—he was driving down a dark asphalt road without a helmet.

"One thing I've learned is be avoided because it usually involves a mistake in judgment," said his mom. But she adds that her son ultimately fell victim to being "too nice a boy."

After spending the day readying a Greene County hunting camp for the opening of deer season, Matt obligingly drove a friend's winch-equipped ATV back to camp headquarters for him. "He was not familiar with riding an ATV with a winch, and he didn't know to make sure the winch was injuries in the state in 2003

Life-saving brain surgery helped Matt escape the fate of the 5,791 people (178 of them Mississippians) who were reported killed in ATV accidents from January 1, 1982 to Dec. 31, 2003. But. he did not get off lightly. He now faces months of therapy. "The doctors are very optimistic about Matt's recovery, but time will tell," said his mom. "The brain is a miraculous thing and it's. amazing the recovery that every accident in life could can be done. But it's a slow

Furr, Sison earn $1,500 scholarships

Sixty Mississippi high at the national level. school seniors, including Laure Furr of Pass Christian High School and Therese Sison of Our Lady Academy, will receive a scholarship award of $1,500 annually for up to four years as part of the Robert C. Byrd Honors Scholarship Program.

The award, which is named for the long-time West Virginia legislator, is designed to recognize and reward students who demonstrate outstanding academic achievement. The scholarship is not awarded based on financial need.

A number of factors are considered in the selection of "Byrd Scholars," including standardized test scores, grade point average, participation in extracurricular and leadership activities, and honors and awards received.

The national scholarship program is administered through the Mississippi Department of Education's Office and is open to all high school seniors in public, private, and parochial schools. The requirements for the program were established cational endeavors."

"The

Department of Education has taken action to ensure that all Mississippi students are made aware of this national scholarship program," said Dr. Tony Webster, Director Scholastic Development. "After notifying superintendents, principals, headmasters, and counselors, the scholarship program information and the application posted on the Department's website, along with information about many other scholarships available to Mississippi high school students."

More than 1,500 students applied this year, representing the state's four congressional districts. "A very large number of students utilized the website to apply for the Byrd Scholarship Program as well as other scholarship programs, Webster said.

"We were extremely pleased with the student's Scholastic Development response to this year's program, and would like to thank all the students who applied and wish them continued success in their edu-

Hurricane evacuation zones updated

BY ELLIS C. CUEVAS
Publisher Emeritus

ne of the biggest complaints received by the Hancock County Emergency Management Agency (EMA) during Tropical Storm Cindy and Hurricane Dennis was about the evacuation boundaries, EMA director Brian Adam said

"Many people confuse the flood zones with evacuation areas, and the lines of each are very different," Adam said. "The boundaries for the Evacuation areas were established by the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) and the U.S. Corps of Engineers.

Any type of Evacuations for persons residing in Zone A are for Tropical Storms and Category 1 Hurricanes.

Any type of Evacuations issued for persons in Zone B are for Hurricanes in Categories 2 and 3, in addition to Zone A.

Evacuation for all residents of Zone C is for Category 4 and 5 Hurricanes, as well as all other Zones.

"Even with us not setting the standards for the Evacuation Zones for the county, by law we have to use the boundaries set by the maps issued by FEMA," Adam emphasized.

Adam continued, "We are not the only county, or parish having abide by the guidelines of FEMA for evacuations, as they have set the zones for all coastal areas of the country."

"Hancock's EMA's first and primary duty is for the safety of the residents. We have to use the tools provided to us by FEMA for evacuations," Adam allowed.

Adam said, "When evacuations are needed, we take a strong look at and review the category of a storm by taking in consideration a lot of information coming from the National Weather Service. All of this is taken into consideration before we issue evacuation orders."

Hancock's Emergency Management Agency is open Mondays through Fridays, from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

"We encourage any resident having any question to gives us a call at 228-467-9226, or visit our office at the back of the Hancock County Court Annex, 508 Ulman Avenue, Bay St. Louis," Adam reported, adding, "We are here to serve the public."

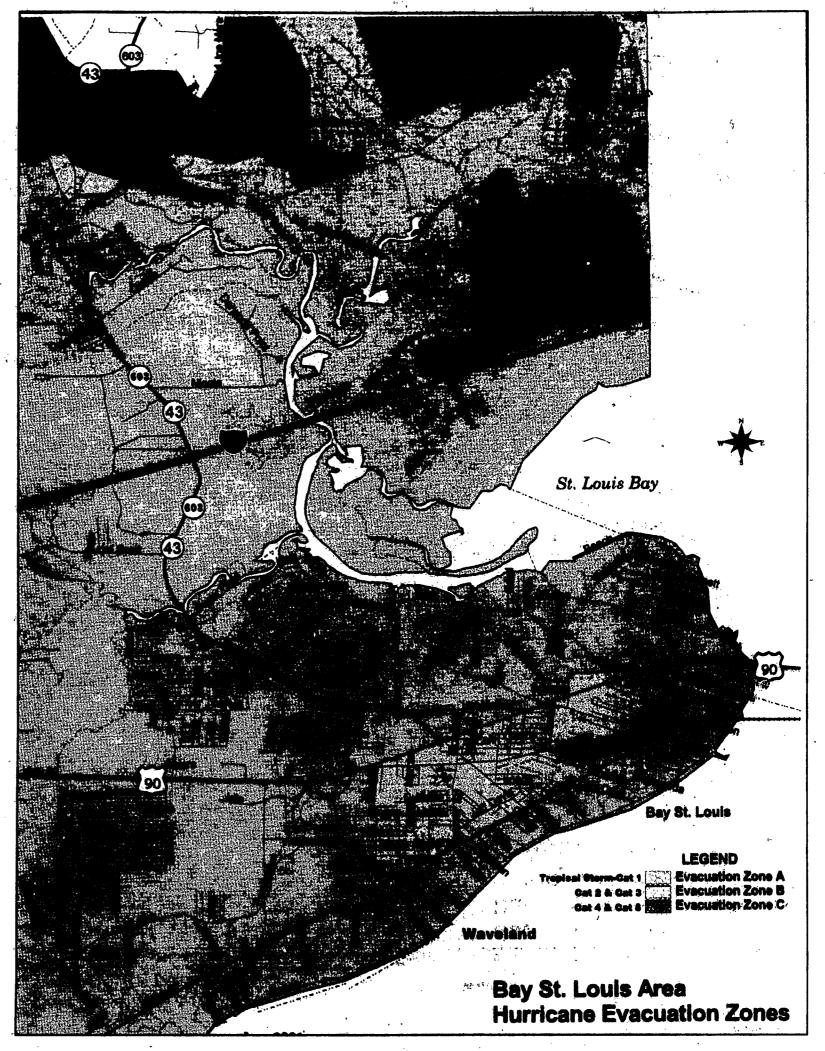

* From the Mississippi Department of Transportation - Due to severe traffic congestion during an evacuation of the Gulf Coast last year, MDOT announces the following changes for the 2005 hurricane season.

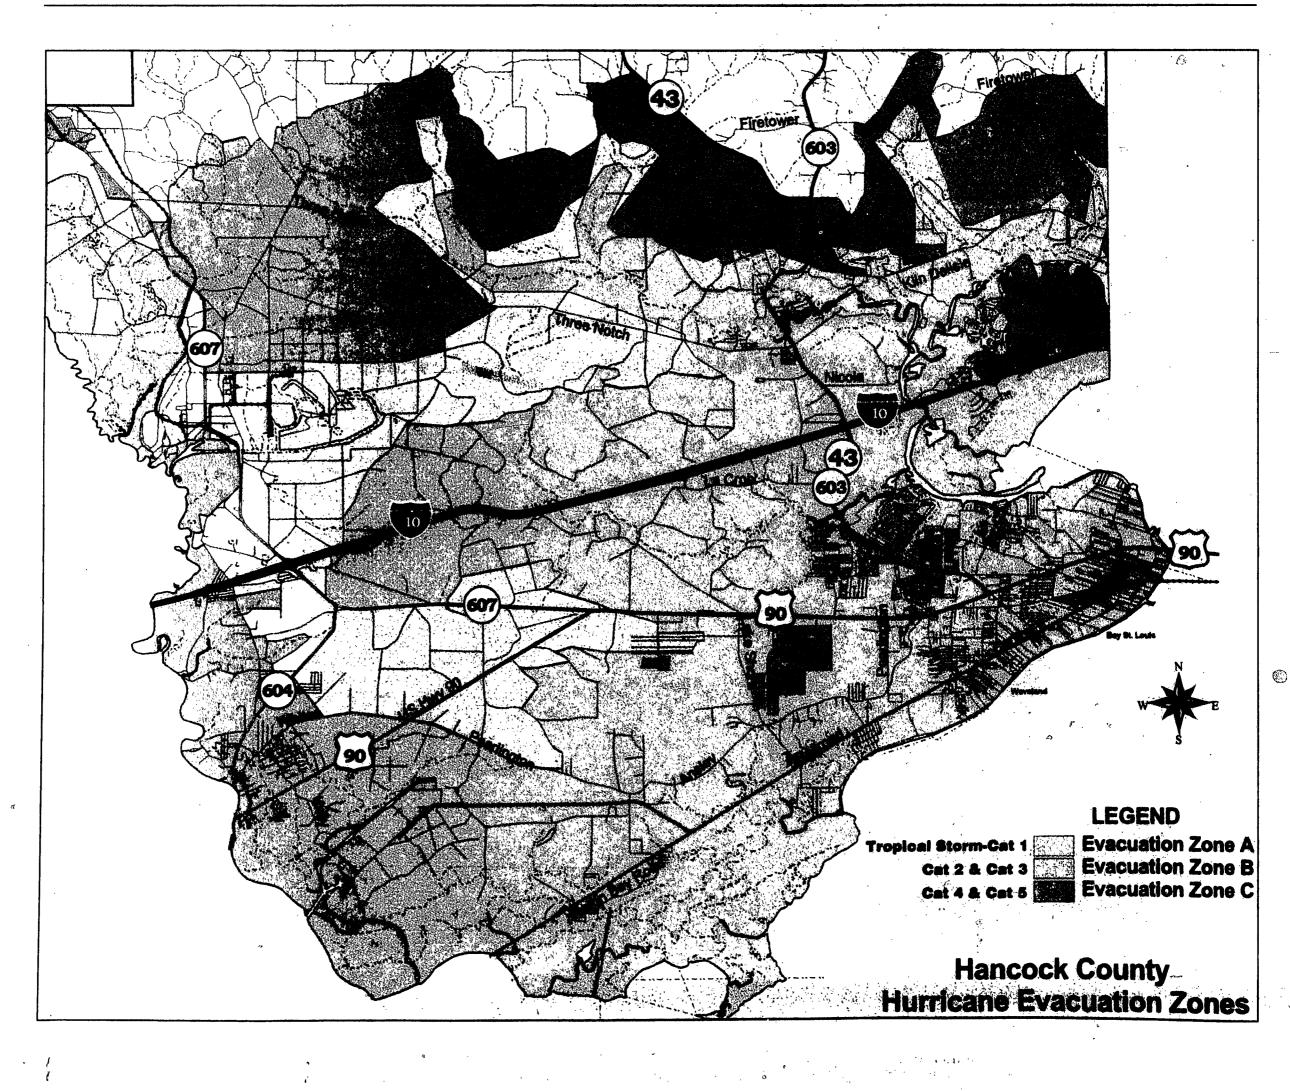

In order to relieve Highway 49, the following changes will go into effect ONLY IF the Governor orders a mandatory evacuation OR if traffic volume is overwhelmingly increasing.

Northbound traffic on Highway 49 will NOT be allowed to exit at either Highway 98 or I-59.

Northbound traffic on Highway I-59 can exit ONLY at Highway 11 (Exit 60) of westbound onto Hardy Street/Hwy 98 (Exit 65).

Westbound traffic on Highway 98 will NOT be allowed to exit onto Highway 49, and will be force to merge onto I-59.
